This online resource could be used as an introduction to fungi.

The resource is a 5-minute video that teaches students about fungi and how their physical characteristics are related to the conditions of the environment.

The video addresses whether or not mushrooms are a plant, and discusses how mushrooms are classified. It also provides information on the types of mushrooms and moulds, how they reproduce, and how they are grown. It explains how mushrooms and moulds are used in society for food and medicine.

This video would suit being viewed in conjunction with students studying a unit on micro-organisms and/or how the growth and survival of a living thing is affected by its environment.
